

Adventure Philanthropist: Great Adventures Volunteering Abroad

The plan was there was no plan: visit all seven continents, see what happens. Erin Michelson is a high adventureess who lives life on the edge. Giving up a successful business, her stake to a house, and all of her possessions, she decided to just take her money and run. Surviving swindlers and saints, she struggles to keep her eyes and heart open. Her escapades show us not only how to tackle a mine-field, how to bathe an elephant, and where to find a string of pearls, but also how to make a world of difference to those who need it most vulnerable women and children. For two years, she canvases the globe, searching for an authentic experience and the chance to reach out and leave the world, even just a small part of it, a better place. Meet Erin Michelson, Adventure Philanthropist.

About the Author: Christened The New Philanthropist by National Geographic Traveler magazine, Erin Michelson is a recognized social entrepreneur and recipient of multiple international awards. Having left the world of corporate finance to work with nonprofit organizations, she built a successful consulting firm helping nonprofit organizations achieve exponential growth. Erin has lived and studied in Auckland, Beijing, and Cape Town, and holds degrees in International Relations, Political Science, and Government & Public Administration. A lover of adventure sports, Erin is a daredevil in both the sporting arena and the field of philanthropy.
