

Homes in the Wilderness A Pilgrims Journal of Plymouth Colony in the Year 1620

Editors Note Homes in the Wilderness was first published at London in 1622 as A Relation or Journal of the Proceedings of the Plantation settled at Plymouth in New England The book is commonly called Mourts Relation because the preface is signed G Mourt, and no other indication of authorship is given There was, however, no such person as Mourt or Morton among the Mayflowers company, and it is now believed that Governor Bradford, Edward Winslow, and others of the colonists kept this journal This edition contains the old language but has somewhat modernized, but every effort has been made to preserve the flavor of the original vigorous King James English The book has been retitled Homes in the Wilderness because the old title is unwieldy and fails to suggest the dramatic struggle of this gallant company of a hundred who made their homes in the wilderness
