

Phobos Nocturne

The beautiful naked bodies of the magnificent Seschol were a sight to behold, and setting foot on a new and inhabited planet, the planet of our ancestors, was exhilarating. At times I seemed to have memories I could not possibly have had, and in my heart, I knew that I was as much Seschol as human. Knowing that catastrophe had hit their beautiful green planet was heartbreaking, and we could feel their pain. It was visible in their eyes, and we were determined to help them.

Excerpt: Kevin and I were standing in a very comfortable lounge area stark naked in front of three Seschol. One, who I assumed to be Eohala, noticed our embarrassment. My apologies. We didnt mean to embarrass you. We will disrobe. Im impressed with your knowledge of us, but what is Phobos? Is that a place your people have settled on Oolia? No, Phobos is one of Oolias small moons. The Seschol were crestfallen. Oolia, as we knew it, had no moons. It would appear that catastrophe did hit our beautiful green planet. We could feel their pain, visible in their eyes. Without thinking, I spontaneously gave Eohala a hug. He was surprised, but hugged me back. Im sorry, Eohala. I didnt mean to take liberties, but you looked like someone in need of a hug. You neednt apologize, Kyle. Affection is important in our culture, but then, I guess you knew that. Would you like to meet some of our people? I know theyd like to meet you. We would indeed. Where should we go? I was thinking about their beautiful naked bodies as we walked. The truth was that neither of us was sleepy. When we got down to our section, which was largely unoccupied, I asked them if they would like to stay on the base or go back to their ship. Wed like to stay here, if it isnt too much trouble. We only need one room. No trouble at all. We have a two room suite, but only use half of it. You are most welcome to stay with us. Here we are. Please come in. I showed them in, pointing out the fully equipped bathroom complete with a large Jacuzzi. Ahh, a therapy pool. How inviting. Would you like to join us?
