Excerpt: ... CHAPTER V LaFollette's First Candidacy for Governor. Another Sharp Campaign--Hoard Disclaims Understanding Or Deal At Convention--Bribery Of Delegates Charged--Scofield Nominated. A RECRUDESCENCE of the uprising of the LaFollette-Haugen element in 1896 was inevitable, composed as this element largely was of eager, elate young men, fired with ideals and enthusiasm, and inspired by the strong showing they had made in the previous campaign. LaFollette was naturally regarded by this element as the logical candidate for governor and in time he announced his candidacy. That he had retained the grip he had once more acquired on his old congressional district in 1894 was demonstrated early in the campaign by his election as a delegate to the republican national convention at St. Louis. Judge E. W. Keyes, former state chairman, had been brought out against him, but after LaFollette had carried every ward in their home city of Madison and every county in the district but one, he was chosen by acclamation. At this national convention he served on the committee on resolutions, and also made a speech placing in nomination for the vice presidency, Henry Clay Evans of Tennessee. This national convention was to prove of more than passing interest and significance to Wisconsin state politics. Although the democrats had obtained a new lease of power in 1892, they were defeated in 1894. A roster printing scandal proved embarrassing to them and the republicans strengthened themselves by repudiating the Bennett law and playing heavily on the dramatic military record of Major Upham--thus carrying the election.

However, once back in power, the republicans proceeded to repudiate their generally expressed pledges to continue the prosecution of the treasury cases so successfully...
