

Missing You in Charleston

Her best friend and her hero. That's what Adrianna Cooper calls the two Davis brothers next door. Their families have been living next door to each other since before she can remember and they have been looking after her just as long. For years she has followed them around, played with them, aggravated them, and learned to love them both. With her mother a drunk and her father a busy doctor, they are her self-appointed guardians and fill that role nicely. Adrianna has never needed them more than when her father dies leaving her in her mother's uncertain care. One stormy night drives Adrianna to forever alter her relationship with one of the brothers and she asks to never speak of it again. Then circumstances beyond her control separate them. Can her relationship with them survive the time and distance? Or are secrets kept the biggest threat to her happy future?
