

Red Moon: Full Moon III

The Council has backed off - the Five are no longer hunted and their lives appear to have found some semblance of peace. While dealing with the pain of losing loved ones, Georgiana, Sky, Ryan and Aidan try to get back whatever normalcy they can get. But Aidan returns sick from visiting his parents, a situation that is strange because weres aren't meant to be sick, least of all the Five. As other students show symptoms that can't be attributed to any particular disease, Georgiana suffers an attack, Sky must face her own demons, and Henry starts a new relationship Georgiana is uncertain of. And no matter how hard they try to get to the bottom of things, they must all deal with the past before they are able to fight for their lives. Extract:

Prologue How far will you go to save a friend's life; how much will you risk? When you've fought so hard to live, when others have stood by your side undeterred, do you ever draw the line? Do you ever give up?

1 Are you ready, Geo? Ryans intonation of her name sounded like Jo. Georgiana liked it. He was the only one to call her that, and she'd gotten used to it by the second time he'd said it. Now she wouldn't have him call her any other way. Might as well, right? she shrugged and he nodded. Before they stepped out of the cluster of trees and into the round, ten-foot wide clearing that surrounded the school, she reached for his hand and pulled him towards her. Dawn had broken an hour ago, and mid-March in Colorado the temperature was comfortable enough given their bodies and the simple clothes they wore. Both clad in jeans, long-sleeved t-shirts and light sweaters, chucks on their feet, their backpacks on the ground next to them, they faced each other. At five feet five, Georgiana had to tilt her head so that she could stare into Ryans big dark green eyes, as he was five feet ten. She looked at his snub nose that she found both manly and cute, the full lips that wouldn't stop tempting her, the stubble that had grown over the past couple of weeks that had been shaving off during school time. Georgiana entwined her fingers in his dark brown curls and he let her pull his head down for a kiss. Their lips meshed together, soft, warm, caring, enjoying the contact in a relaxed manner, his hands traveling down her back and cupping her butt, while her left hand roamed the taut muscles in his back and his wide shoulders, her right hand holding onto the back of his head. The kiss deepened and their lips made way for their tongues, and they forgot everything as they clung to each other, their bodies leaving no space between them. Despite the need, they pulled apart after a few minutes, their breaths hitched, their lips swollen. Without letting go of her, Ryan rubbed his nose against her cheek and planted a quick kiss on her forehead. They embraced and closed their eyes, only feeling each other. Georgiana could smell Ryan's musky scent, which had traces of grass and woods from all the time they'd spent outdoors, and he breathed in the strawberry and vanilla scent that appeared to follow her constantly. Her big dark green eyes that appeared almost black, with the weird golden specks around the irises, which she'd inherited from her father, cracked open and she sighed. Mrs. Kent won't be happy if we're late, he mumbled into the top of her shoulder-length hazel hair that was tied in a ponytail.

I know, she muttered against his collarbone. And it's Principal Kent now, she added with a grin. I think we'd better get going, Ryan's voice made his reluctance clear. Or we could run away, Georgiana replied, wistful. You don't run away, Ryan squeezed her, his voice teasing and serious at the same time, and this is school. You've still got a lot to learn. I know, she pulled back and they stared at each other. I'm ready. And it's going to be all right. It is, Ryan agreed. Let's go back, Georgiana said.
