

A Valets Duty

At the turn of the twentieth century, Henry Simpkins is a valet at Taverslow, the Earl of Wayshaws Somerset home. When the Earls younger brother, Rafe, arrives from his villa in Italy, Henry is given the task of caring for his mischievous dogs, Pepe and Paolo. As part of his duties, he also goes to Rafe's room each night to tidy away his clothes. One night Rafe asks Henry to go beyond his valet's duty, to relieve his sexual tensions. Henry enjoys their increasingly intimate encounters, but he is soon disturbed to find he feels more for Rafe than mere physical attraction. Now Henry faces a difficult decision. Can he remain in the same house as Rafe if his affections are not returned?
