

The Arms of Death

Deanna Hennessy jumped or was thrown to her death from the Shoreline Bridge and her brother, Harry, is determined to blow it up as an act of vengeance. A suspect in her death is known to have worked at the Arms of Love soup kitchen, a refuge for the down and out run by local character Jo-Jo Martinelli. Homicide detectives Martin McCallister and Leo Aronica must deal with this tragedy and also the murder of a prominent lawyer, Weston Benedict. By a strange coincidence, the teenage suspect in this killing, Carl Getz also frequented the Arms of Love. What is the connection between the dining hall and these acts of violence? As the investigations deepen, the detectives begin to feel that their chances of solving the two cases are slim, if not impossible.
