Apostolic Confrontation: Paul on Mars Hill

Art Katz

Paul on Mars Hill is the sacred man confronting the secular; the spiritual mind verses the worldly mind; the heavenly perspective brought to bear toward that which is earthly. It is an ultimate, classic and eternal confrontation and collision, and therefore every element in this text and everything that the Spirit of God is expressing through Paul to men is not only powerfully pertinent in that express moment, but it continues to reverberate throughout all time and history and even to this hour. It actually might be said that it is more pungent and more significant now at the conclusion of time and history, than it was two thousand years ago when Paul spoke it. The elements are the same. Nothing has changed. But when the Jews of Thessalonica found out that the word of God had been proclaimed by Paul in Berea also, they came there likewise, agitating and stirring up the crowds. And then immediately the brethren sent Paul out to go as far as the sea; and Silas and Timothy remained there. Now those who conducted Paul brought him as far as Athens; and receiving a command for Silas and Timothy to come to him as soon as possible, they departed (Acts 17:13-15). Paul was fleeing from persecution, and while he was waiting for his colleagues to catch up with him, the Spirit of God set something in motion in his spirit. This is a pure, apostolic episode and a revelation of the apostolic man, all the more beautiful and profound because it was unexpected. It was not sought for, nor humanly arranged. It was totally ordered of by God. Art Katz
