

Lusitania R.E.X.

LUSITANIA R.E.X is a historical fiction account of the sinking of the Lusitania replete with spies and secret societies, super weapons, monarchs, millionaires and martyrs. After being struck by a single torpedo on May 7th 1915, the Lusitania sank in only eighteen minutes. Passengers such as Alfred Vanderbilt, one of the wealthiest men in the world, ignored warnings from the German embassy, confident the fastest ship in the world could outrun enemy submarines. Since the time of her sinking, the Lusitania has been wrapped in mystery and intrigue. Experts continue to debate the cause of the second explosion that sealed her fate after the torpedo struck. Imperial Germany immediately claimed she was loaded with explosives destined for the front. Why did the Admiralty withdraw her escort ship? Who were the three German stowaways arrested shortly after sailing? Why did Alfred Vanderbilt give away his lifebelt? LUSITANIA R.E.X weaves fiction around the known facts to create a plausible explanation of some of the mysteries surrounding her sinking. The book describes how modern, mechanized war with its zeppelin raids and poison gas brought to an end the gilded age of Newport, Edwardian England and Imperial Germany and Russia. The story unfolds on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean in settings that range from gilded palaces and the Lusitania to the blood-soaked trenches of Ypres. Lusitania R.E.X has been named a finalist for the 2015 Award for Historical Fiction. The award is named after the late M.M. Bennetts, author of May 1812 and Of Honest Fame, and the focus is on literary quality and historical accuracy. The winner of the award will be announced at the luncheon of the Historical Novel Society Conference in Denver, Colorado on June 27, 2015. Its a good yarn in the Dan Brown vein, with glamorous settings, wartime peril, political machinations, millionaires, aristocrats and royalty, and a generous helping of sex and romance. Nautilus Telegraph, January 2015
