Excerpt: ... THE COMPLETION OF THE BUNKER HILL MONUMENT. An address Jelivered on Bunker Bill, on the Vtth of June, 1843. INTRODUCTORY NOTE. Seventeen years had elapsed since the corner-stone of Bunker Hili Monument was laid, with the address of Webster, which had become imperishably associated, in every part of the Union, with the event which It was designed to commemorate. It was fitting that the eloquence of Webster should crown the work. The last stone was laid in Its place on the morning of the 23d of July, 1842. It was determined by the directors of the Association, that the completion of the work should be celebrated in a manner not less imposing than that in which the laying of the corner-stone had been celebrated. Many circumstances conspired to increase the interest of the occasion. Websters address in 1825 had obtained the widest circulation throughout the country. Passages from it had passed into household words throughout the Union. They made the Bunker Hill Monument a familiar thought with the people. The President and his Cabinet had accepted invitations to be present. One hundred and eight surviving veterans of the Eevolution, among whom were some who were in the battle of Bunker Hill, imparted a touching interest to the scene. The day was uneom monly fine; cool for the season, and clear. Mr. Webster was stationed upon an elevated platform, in front of the audience and of the mora ment towering in the background. It is estimated that a hundrec thousand persons were gathered about the spot, and nearly half tha number are supposed to have ben within the reach of the orators voice. When, after saying, It is not from my lips, etc. The
