

The First Hague Conference (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The First Hague Conference The meeting of the first Peace Conference at The Hague, on the 18th of May, 1899, marked the opening of a new era in human history. In the worlds great peace movement it was an event of such cardinal significance that the peace workers in all nations have come by common consent to make the anniversary their chief day for the annual celebration and public presentation of their cause. The first Hague Conference was in germ the true Parliament of Man. The dream of the prophets and the song of the poets here found their first partial realization in plain prose. Only twenty-six of the fifty-nine governments claiming independent sovereignty in 1899 were represented at the Conference; but so profound was the influence of the Conference, and so clearly was it recognized that it represented the worlds vitality and commanded its future, that at the second Conference, in 1907, forty-four governments sent delegates, representing practically the whole world.
