

GREAT SOUTHERNERS, Annotated and Illustrated.

This book is a potpourri of mini-biographies and interesting facts about prominent men and women of the American South in the 18th and 19th centuries. Among them are statesmen, soldiers, humorists, jurists, presidents, adventures and explorers, novelists, and poets. This work was first published in 1900. A magazine of that time reviewed it as follows: By all means let the people of the world become acquainted with famous Americans of the past. Mr. Hales bright little volume is entitled Great Southerners, and it will afford pride to a Southerner [and in fact ALL Americans] to own it. A vignette portrait of each person heads the various articles. The beginning of Mr. Hales Mark Twain article will show Mr. Hales method. The person, he begins, who is known to more people of different conditions than any other literary man in the world is Samuel L. Clemens, the humorist. He was born in the little Missouri town called Florida, attended village school, lived in a frontier community, worked as a journeyman printer, fought in the Confederate army, and learned the business of pilot all before he became convinced that a literary life was the calling for which he was best adapted. Hale also gives life sketches of the following people: George Washington, Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, Henry Lighthorse Harry Lee, James Monroe, John Marshall, James Madison, John Sevier. Andrew Jackson, Peter Cartwright, John Pendleton Kennedy, Edgar Allan Poe, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, John Randolph, Robert Y. Hayne, Thomas H. Benton, Sam Houston, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, George F. Pierce, John Bell, John B. McFerrin, James K. Polk, Roger B. Taney, Zachary Taylor, David Crockett, Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee, Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson, Enoch M. Marvin, William E. Munsey, Alexander H. Stephens, Paul Hamilton, Hayne Henry

Timrod, Augusta Evans Wilson, Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), Albert Taylor Bledsoe, Henry Watterson, George W. Cable, Holland N. Mtyeire, Sidney Lanier, Mary N. Murfree, Joel Chandler Harris, and James Lane Allen. The editor (a retired history teacher) has annotated the book with supplementary material and a wealth of photographs.
