

Will Warburton

The sea-wind in his hair, his eyes agleam with the fresh memory of Alpine snows, Will Warburton sprang out of the cab, paid the driver a double fare, flung on to his shoulder a heavy bag and ran up, two steps at a stride, to a flat on the fourth floor of the many-tenanted building hard by Chelsea Bridge. His rat-tat-tat brought to the door a thin yellow face, cautious in espial, through the narrow opening. Is it you, sir? All right, Mrs. Hopper! How are you? how are you? He threw his bag into the passage, and cordially grasped the woman's hands. Dinner ready? Savagely hungry. Give me three minutes, and serve.
